Brie,

I have felt a tremendous sadness is not speaking to you, especially knowing you are pregnant. You have to understand that writing stuff about me that makes me look unstable is the worst cruelty to do to the outside world- I never want to risk my daughter being taken away from me.

She is such a beautiful girl, and the best blessing I have ever received. She is such a happy baby- she smiles and laughs all the time. On Friday she will be three months, I can't believe how fast it has gone.

Sadly the deterioration of my relationship with you has thrown my deeper and deeper into the arms of Steve for support. I'm still really scared to do it on my own, but am working up the courage. I don't want to spend any more time then necessary with Steve, but I am trying to save money and have a lot of support here.

Anyway I love you a lot and hope you are feeling ok. I'm not sure how far along you are, but am really happy for you that you are finally pregnant. I miss little Cleo a lot too- give her a kiss for me. I am so thankful for all you did for me when I was pregnant- and really what you also did for little Evie. You gave me the love and support to pull me through the hardest time of my life.

Anyway I don't want to miss out on this special time for you and hope we can make amends. You just really have to protect me from the outside world and not make me look like an unfit mother.

Love you forever my sister and hopefully talk soon,

Tara
